Cosmopolitan Picture Is Well Worth Seeing

The Whip

Produced for W. A. Brady from the play by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, under the direction of Maurice Tourneur. Released through Central Film Company and presented at the Cosmopolitan Theater. The cast of characters:

Diana Beverly, who loves her dogs, horses and automobiles; a typical outdoor girl.....Alma Hanlon
Hubert Brancaster, an American sportsman.....Irving Cummings
Mrs. d'Aguila, with a shady past and a shadowy future, as trustworthy as a rope of sand.....June Elvidge
Baron Sartoris, European adventurer; a decadent member of an aristocratic family. Paul McAlister
Bo Kelly, a prominent New York bookmaker .....Alfred Hemming
Judge Beverly.....Warren Cook

Do you remember that childish rhyme that goes: "First the worst, second the same, last the best of all the game"? Well, we are not casting any aspersions on the motion pictures that have preceded "The Whip" at the Cosmopolitan, but Ascher Bros., proprietors, have certainly arranged to leave us with pleasant memories of the photoplay career of that playhouse. The stage play is said to have been a wonderful production. I did not see it, unfortunately, but I doubt much whether it could have shown so vividly as the film version many of the scenes that seem to be vital.

The story is built about a race horse, a horse that, like many high-bred animals, has a temper which decreases the value of the beast because of its varinbility. The horses pictured are real equines of the blood, even a novice could tell that. It is a treat to see them, especially in these days when horse racing has been tabooed for years and even the bridle paths are more or less deserted. The fox hunt which is shown for our benefit has that quality of realism which makes one long to pack up a trunk or two and hasten some place where the chief recreation is following the hounds. One can almost hear the dry leaves crackle and feel the frost in the early morning air. A more appropriate season could not have been chosen for the presentation of the production, and if it doesn't cause an exodus from the city it will be because most of us are chained to office desks. Then there are the dogs; even if you are not a dog lover you will enjoy seeing them. And thrills—all the approved suspense that we are advised to put in when we attempt scenario writing—motors tearing to destruction because of the villainies of the hated rival for the hand of the heroine, a train wreck and a horse race. It fairly chills your blood with excitement in some parts.

Irving Cummings does his work well. Alma Hanlon makes a pretty little vis-a-vis for him, but June Elvidge as the scheming adventuress is the more conspicuous figure. The beauty of the settings and the animals are the most striking points of the production, which will be a treat for all who see it.

Miss Evelyn Johnson, 7122 Union Ave., will give a dancing party at Hamilton Park during the latter part of November.

Mrs. G. H. Nash, 7526 Eggleston Ave., chairman of the educational and art department of Hamilton Park, was director of the Country Fair held at Hamilton Park.

Violet May Cheezums was proclaimed a perfect 5-year-old child. The following children were also awarded prizes: H. R. Crothers, Hazel Chambers, Margaret Albertson, John Turner, R. O'Loughlin, Edward Wonder, Betty Long, Marion Rice, Marion Lilloth, Russel Cross.

First "Bab" Picture Scores Big Success

Marguerite Clark Has Good Vehicle in Mary Roberts Rinehart's Story Shown at the Cosmopolitan

Barbara Archibald made up her mind that she must have a low neck gown for her coming out party, even against her mother's wishes. Her sister, only twenty months her senior, wore them regularly and she saw no reason why she couldn't. She was 17 and, besides, they were so becoming. Like most youthful misses of her tender years, she wanted to be grown up, and though the gown made no difference in her years, it did in appearance.

So, being chockful of schemes, she invented a phantom sweetheart, to her mother's complete horror, supplied him with a name inspired by a malted milk label, purchased a photograph of a handsome actor and autographed it appropriately that she might substantiate the existence of her dream hero. She got her dress, to discard her sweetheart and forget him forever more.

Were it not for Carter Brooks, a friend of the Archibald family, the incident would have been closed right there and forgotten save by Barbara and her diary, which received all her confidence, delightfully misspelled. But Carter knew the original of the photograph and presented him at Barbara's coming-out party to cure her of her deceptive habits.

From this lovely opening "Bab's Diary" at the Cosmopolitan brings forth a series of complications full of wholesome fun, which precipitate its heroine, Marguerite Clark, into a number of lively mixups. The harder she strives to extricate herself from her difficulties the deeper she sinks.

This is the first of the "sub-deb" stories by Mary Roberts Rinehart to come to the screen, and if it indicates what might be expected of the subsequent plays, it presages a splendid series of comedies for future presentation. It is a charming bit of audaciousness from start to finish, full of sparkling humor.

As usual, Miss Clark is invincible. The character she portrays is girlish in appearance and habits and her own mannerisms lend themselves ideally to the part. Miss Clark is favored with an excellent supporting cast, including Nigel Barrie, Leonora Morgan, Frank Losee, Jack O'Brien and Helen Greene.

A Word to the Women

Dear Madam:

Just how Vivian Martin, in "The Sunset Trail," climbs from her lowly birthplace of the western mountains to become the bride-to-be of a wealthy eastern banker can best be shown by the photoplay itself, which is to be seen at the Cosmopolitan Theater on Thursday, Nov. 1.

In a talk which some of our officials had with Miss Martin at the Lasky Studio last week, the charming little lady who started her stage career at the age of six in "Cyrano de Bergerac," with Richard Mansfield, and soon after appeared in the title role of "Peter Pan," said that in all of her work in such well-known stage productions as "Father and the Boys," "The Spendthrift," "Officer 666," "Stop Thief," "The Only Son," and other equally well-known plays, said she never enjoyed herself as in the filming of this picture.

She had some exciting times, too, during its development. One night, just before the company was starting out to film the exterior scenes of "The Sunset Trail," a fire was discovered in one of the cabins about 11 o'clock. Miss Martin, her director, George H. Melford, and several of the company, jumped from their beds and seized a mechanical extinguisher.

"We wrecked the cabin, but we certainly put out the fire," exclaimed Miss Martin.

In another instance, in mid-stream, while Harrison Ford, her leading man, was carrying her across a river that was waist-high, Mr. Ford stepped on a rolling stone and the two went under the cold water. The party was a mile and half from camp and it was necessary for Miss Martin to run the entire distance to keep from becoming seriously chilled.

"I did not mind it, however," said Miss Martin. "One must get accustomed to such things in making pictures, but you have no idea how health-giving, exhilirating and inspiring it is, especially when one realizes that one's work is to be viewed by millions of people with whom one becomes screen-acquainted."

Miss Martin added that "if you would write to me and tell me how you like this photoplay," she would be very glad to reciprocate by sending you her autographed photograph.

Come early, please, so as to be sure and have a good seat in this most refined and thrilling photoplay.

Yours very sincerely,
Bruce Godshaw, Manager.

Young Man, Suppose You Had Never Seen a Woman

Suppose that you had never known that such a thing as a woman existed, and then suppose that a dainty little lady came climbing over your garden wall. Now, just what would you think? Jerry Benham looked once, and then he looked again. He could not believe that there was such a thing. He was going to toss her back over the wall where she came from, but something made him change his mind. And he grew fond of her, but then he met Marcia, and—

Well, you will learn all about it when you see Harold Lockwood in "Paradise Garden" at the Cosmopolitan Friday.

Paradise Garden

FOR reasons that the picture explains a lad is raised from infancy to man's estate in a sequestered place without ever having seen a woman. At an unexpected moment one fell right over the garden wall and a little later another one hobbled up serenely. One was a very nice little girl and the other most superbly wicked

Which Did He Take?

Guess either way, and yet you may be wrong

THE strangest and most interesting proposition since pictures became a rage. We read of men who have not heard of the war, but we never knew a man who had never seen a woman. Yet it could be! Maybe! They say a camel can go a week without taking a drink, but who wants to be a camel?

GEO A CLARK, ENGLEWOOD'S FAVORITE COMEDIAN, NEXT WEEK

To furnish a production that can meet with the immediate approval of all classes of theater goers and at the same time create a new departure in a certain field of amusement is no easy task as the most astute manager will tell you Especially is the task more difficult in the burlesque firmament where certain tastes must be catered to and where the patrons appear to be more exacting and critical Apparently Wainstock has solved the problem for his latest organization The Military Maids with George A Clark that versatile comedian which will hold the boards at the Englewood Theater next week starting with the matinee Sunday

It is now enjoying the best season of its most profitable career This is not at all surprising when it is considered that it has gathered a cast of players who are capable in every department A two act side splitting burletta punctured with scintillating and unctuous dialogue effervescent humor and lilting melodies feature galore and novelties is offered A Day at the Camp

Said to be a riot of fun and mirth veritably reeling with laughter and complications The piece will have the value of George A Clark's long experience as a producer while the supporting cast is all that could be desired Every department has been carefully looked after and the choristers alone should supply an individual attraction This end of the show is composed of twenty dashing and shapely maidens who besides possessing good looks have talent and voices to recommend them The feature as an extra attraction will be the Humbabula Dance

Miss Glaine McIntyre of Limerick Ave received a dainty linen shower from a party of young lady friends Sunday afternoon the affair being a surprise in honor of her approaching marriage to Kenneth Frost

Mr and Mrs P Higgins visited their brother William Arman who is in training at Rockford last Sunday

Mr and Mrs Cornelius Small of Sangamon St announce the birth of a son Oct 6 at Mercy Hospital

Mr Clark was the tramp who made so many friends here last season and seven before with Hello Paris and as the management has received hundreds of inquiries as to when Mr Clark would return this should be a gala week at the Englewood

HOW TO CAN FISH FOR HOME USE

As a measure of economy in the present period of high prices the government bureau of fisheries urges housewives, particularly those living near streams and lakes or the seashore, to preserve fish for home consumption

Fish can be bought when they are cheap, during times of plenty, and held for use in the winter, when prices are high In many cases waste fishes, which because of prejudice or ignorance are not placed on the market may be bought for a low price and sometimes obtained from fishermen for the asking Practically all fishes are edible, and purchasers should not be deterred from buying them on account of their unattractive appearance Some of the ugliest are among the best

Here is a good method of canning

When using coarse scaled, thick skinned fishes cut off the fins or make an incision on each side of the fin and pull it out Make an incision through the skin along the back, another along the belly and connect these by a third encircling the body just behind the head. Impale the head on a hook or sharpened nail driven through a plank, take hold of the skin at the angle of the two incisions at the back of the head and remove it by pulling toward the tail Thin skinned fishes, like herring and alewives, should be scaled, not skinned

Cut off the head remove the intestines and other organs and take out the backbone by making a cut with a sharp knife on each side inside of the body cavity Wash thoroughly, taking particular care to remove the blood along the back

Cut the fish into strips to fit the length of the jars to be used and rub with dry salt, using a level tablespoonful to each pint jar of fish Fill the jars with the pieces packed as tightly as possible, put on the rubber rings and place the caps on the jars loosely, so that the steam can escape Put no water in the jars Cook in a pressure cooker for one and one-half hours after steam pressure registers fifteen pounds or the temperature 250 degrees Tighten the caps of the jars and permit cooling

REAL FRAGRANCE.

How Attar of Roses Is Made by the Cold Method.

Grasse is the city of perfumes and more particularly the city of perfumes of roses S Leonard Bastin described a visit to this French city where the fields are filled with rose and orange groves "The first stage in the extraction of the perfume writes Mr Bastin, "consists in the separation of the petals of the flowers from the other parts Just at the time of our visit roses figure largely The baskets of blooms first go into the hands of scores of women workers, who with deft fingers deal with each blossom On the floor of the factory there is piled a heap of roses several feet in height and the entire quantity would make many fair sized cartloads The most precious of all the perfumes distilled in the factories is the attar of roses No less than forty five pounds of rose petals are needed to make one gram (fifteen and one half grains troy) of the essence Briefly the methods of extracting the fragrance are as follows The petals are spread between sheets of glass which are held about four inches apart by wooden frames On each side of the glass is a layer of lard a little less than half an inch in thickness The sheets of glass with their load of petals are piled one above another and at the end of about twenty four hours it is found that the essential oil from the flowers has been absorbed by the lard The lard is finally melted in a large iron vessel and is then mixed with spirits The essential oil of the flowers rises to the surface in combination with the spirit finally it is collected and filtered This particular plan is known as the cold method'"

Why Lions Roar Is at Last Discovered by a Scientist

The eminent English naturalist Sir Richard Owen, made the interesting discovery that the lion roars simply because the hyoid bone in his throat is loose In the cat this bone is stationary, and therefore the cat purrs and cannot roar, but in the lion and tiger the hyoid is loose, and even when calling to their mates the larger members of the cat family including the leopard and jaguar roar

The roars of the jaguar and leopard are "like hoarse barking coughs An interval of about one second separates the expiratory effort" says Sir Richard The cheetah and the puma are like the domestic cat their hyoid bones are firmly set in place, and they can purr

How to Find Your Proper Weight

A simple way to tell what your weight should be has been discovered First write the figures 110 Then take the number of inches by which you exceed five feet and multiply them by 5 Add the total to the 110 and the result will give you your proper weight Thus a man five feet six inches tall will find that his weight should be 143 pounds

WITH YOUR HAND ON THE PLOW

The new field is before you
And your hand is on the plow,
It is too late to turn back—
You dare not turn back now!

For though old friendships beckon
And old scenes engage you more
To waver would be folly
Your weakness mock you sore

The past, with vain allurements
In the present heeded calls
Before you lies new conquest
Ahead a new life calls

—Isabel Porter Weddon

FEAR NOT!

Be not afraid, for out of fear
Doth grow all kinds of ill
Have faith and trail your shining star
And bid your heart be still

There is a power mightier
Than any puny man
That trusted, leads me further far
Than our most lofty plan

It is our unseen Destiny
That ever bids us rise
And shake the shackles from our feet
That we may cleave the skies

—Isabel Porter Weddon

THE CHAIN GANG

I saw the chain-gang niggers work
Upon the red clay road
The white they sang in unison
And kept time with each load
They swung upon their shovels—
Twould break your heart to see
The black, unlucky devils chained
With voices ringing free

I saw them lay their shovels down
And still chained, go to mess
Each with his portion on his plate
Each with no more, no less
And even then in the dim light
Their throats in concord strained
Till in the darkness they lay down
To sleep to dream still chained

Their only guardsman told me some
When they had done their time
Went out and broke the law again
To get back into lin

MY LITTLE ONE, MY OWN

O, how can anyone speak to thee
In tones that ought not ever to be
My little one, my own

O how can anyone gainsay
The right God gave you dear child to play
My little one, my own

O how can anyone do thee harm
Sweet little child, that is soft and warm
My little one, my own

O how can anyone bid thee hush
When lisping words to thy sweet tongue rush
My little one, my own!

O, how can anyone ever fright
Thy childish heart that is filled with light
My little one, my own

O how can anyone ever hurt
The things to thee that thou ought not know
My little one, my own?

Your mother, my dove, will dry your tears
Your mother dove—way all your fears
My little one, my own
